

Strategic Planning & Sustainability

Thursday, May 29, 2008

9:00 AM - 3:30 PM

Stockton, CA

About This Training

This interactive training will focus on the basic principles and core stages of strategic planning and sustainability for non-profit agencies. Participants will gain insight into the areas of workgroup formation, vision & mission development, environmental assessment, critical issue prioritization and organizational planning. The session includes presentations of information, group discussions and experiential activities with a focus on practical "real world" application.

As a result of this training, participants will:

- learn the key elements and principles of a strategic plan
- identify the sequential stages of the planning process
- share lessons learned from the field
- model and demonstrate key planning activities for sustainability

Who Should Attend

First 5 contract Managers, Directors and other professionals such as Board Members of non-profit agencies who work with families and children in San Joaquin County.

Trainer

Dave Nakashima has worked in the field of developing and coordinating culturally appropriate social and health care services to diverse communities for more than twenty years. As an independent consultant, he focuses his facilitation, training, technical assistance and curriculum development services in areas of individual and organizational cultural competence. He has experience guiding collaborative efforts with community based providers, county and state health departments, national non-profit organizations and federal agencies.
